

12 months.
6 themes.
2 cities.
1 project.

Over the next 12 months, KALW 91.7FM Local Public Radio will be asking the residents of San Francisco and Oakland to tell stories of how they Work, Eat, Love, Play, Worship, and Create. We want you to share what's important in your life – your projects, your relationships, your passions – to help us put the “public” back in “public media.” Together, we’ll illuminate life in these two cities, just miles apart, and draw out the common threads that tie us together. And we’ll share what we’ve learned on air, online, on stage, and in public.

How does it work?

Every two months, we’ll choose a theme (Work, Eat, Love, Play, Worship, and Create), and ask you to submit stories in sound and photography, using mobile and online tools. Sometimes we’ll ask a guiding question on air or online; sometimes we’ll pop up in a neighborhood near you, and ask you to drop by and talk to us. It’ll be fun. And you’ll get to know the Bay Area through the people who shape it, day in and day out.

Where to find it

You can find Hear Here stories at www.hearhere.kalw.org. You can browse through the submissions, get to know others, and submit your own stories. We’ll also broadcast Hear Here stories on KALW every week. And at the end of each two-month period, we’ll bring together Hear Here participants, local musicians, and artists for a live “pop-up” storytelling event that showcases the human voice in our communities, and brings people together across social boundaries.
