Something’s Still Missing from SPR’s Fire Station No. 3

The fire poles are back. During renovation of Spokane Public Radio’s future home, the historic Fire Station No. 3, crews removed the two front brass poles. They were carefully replaced and reinforced with steel centers and the tops fitted with bracket supports.

The Wyncote Foundation “South Pole” is sealed at the level of the ceiling (or second story floor if you prefer), the Dodson’s Jewelers “North Pole” is exactly as Spokane firefighters remember it, with the original safety trap doors separating levels.

Major construction on the historic Fire Station No. 3 at 1229 N. Monroe is just finishing up. Where fire trucks used to park is now a lobby and a broadcast studio for the KSFC news and information station. In the back part of the building, where firemen built the city’s fire-fighting apparatus, the acoustics are being fine-tuned for the organization’s Performance and Recording Hall and the KPBX

SPR’s move from the Hoban Building, KPBX’s home for the past 35 years, offers an excellent opportunity to upgrade equipment. New computers will enable SPR’s broadcast engineers to switch locations more efficiently and minimize downtime.

The final fundraising stage for the equipment and its installation is underway. Named Gift Opportunities are still available, from engraved courtyard tiles to naming a broadcast studio. For more information on leaving a lasting legacy for “A Sound Future,” please contact Cary Boyce at (509) 328-5729 or cboyce@kpbx.org.

The stations will move to the new building in stages this year; the timeline depends on how quickly the equipment can be purchased and installed. As the move begins, information and photos will be posted at spokanepublicradio.org/moving.

Dan Webster and Mary Pat Treuhaft are the married hosts of SPR’s Movies 101, airing Fridays at 6:30 p.m. on KPBX and Saturdays at 1 p.m. on KSFC.

Kara Miller, Ph.D. hosts Innovation Hub bringing together thinkers, researchers, and visionaries crafting our future. The show airs Sundays at 2 p.m. on KSFC.
Paula Poundstone returns to Spokane

The comedian on a mission to make us laugh comes to the Bing Crosby Theater in October, and SPR is giving away tickets!

Paula Poundstone is a frequent panelist on NPR’s Wait Wait ... Don’t Tell Me and delights audiences with her quick wit and topical humor.

Anyone renewing their SPR membership or making an extra gift to SPR on or before July 31 will be entered into the drawing. Sustaining members are automatically entered into this and every membership drawing.

To enter with your pledge, use the form below, call the SPR offices at (509) 328-5729, or pledge online at kpbx.org/donate. To enter without making a pledge, please send a postcard to the address in the form below.
