DRAFTING TASK FORCE’S NOTES TO THE HOUSE OF DElegates

Following the Report of the Arkansas Bar Association’s Task Force on Maintaining a Fair and Impartial Judiciary, a Drafting Task Force was formed to produce a proposed Arkansas Constitutional Amendment implementing an appointment process for selection of Supreme Court Justices. While many details were left to the Drafting Task Force, this proposed Amendment was carefully written to follow the dictates of the Task Force as approved by the House of Delegates. The Drafting Task Force considered fidelity to that mandate to be its overarching duty.

The Drafting Task Force further sought to accomplish three objectives with this proposed Amendment: 1) to assure a fair and impartial Court; 2) to create a Court independent of perceived improper influences arising from campaign finances and politics; and 3) to continue the high quality of Justices on our Supreme Court.

The proposed Amendment provides as follows:

Judicial Nominating Commission
A nine member Judicial Nominating Commission will be established. The Commission will accept applications, interview candidates, and nominate three individuals for each vacancy on the Court. The Governor will select a Justice from the three nominees.

Commission’s membership
The Commissioners will be nominated by the Governor (2), the Speaker of the House (1), the Senate President Pro tem (1), the Supreme Court (2), and the Arkansas Bar Association (3). The Chief Justice or the Chief Justice’s designee will chair the Commission as a non-voting member. The Supreme Court and Bar Association nominees will be attorneys.

Supreme Court Term
Following a phase in period, each Justice will serve a single term of fourteen years. Once the phase in period is completed, a new Justice will be appointed each biennium. Positions on the Court that become available by virtue of resignation, retirement, or death will also be filled by appointment, with those appointees serving the balance of the departing Justice’s term.

Current Court
All present members of the Court and the Justice elected in 2018 will complete their full, elected term of office. Because the Task Force believes that past service will be an indication of qualifications for an appointment, the current Justices will be eligible to seek nomination after their elected terms have ended.

Phase In Period
The current election cycle for the Supreme Court will result in one term expiring in 2018, one in 2020, three in 2022, and two in 2024. Beginning with the term ending in 2020, Justices will be appointed to staggered terms designed so that only one term will end every two years.
Transparency
The Commission will assure that its proceedings are transparent and open to the public, subject to the right of the Commission to conduct deliberations in executive session.
JUDICIAL NOMINATING COMMISSION

Twenty-two states utilize judicial nominating commissions and gubernatorial appointments for selecting Supreme Court Justices. The Task Force on Maintaining a Fair and Impartial Judiciary recommended the judicial nominating commission process and the Drafting Task Force adhered to that recommendation. Our reasons were:

a. Amendment 80 to the Arkansas Constitution permits the implementation of a judicial nominating commission to appoint Supreme Court Justices.

b. As opposed to contested elections, the Judicial Nominating Commission is insulated from the influence of raising campaign funds because no campaign funds are required for the Judicial Nominating Commission’s members.

c. Appointed Justices are also insulated from raising campaign funds. By virtue of the nominating and appointment process, individuals will be able to assume the bench free from even the appearance of influence or conflict due to campaign financing.

d. As opposed to contested elections, the nominating commission method is insulated from the influence of campaign politics. The utilization of a multi-member Commission, along with the diverse nominating structure of the Commission, serves to restrict the ability of any one issue or position to control the Commission’s decisions.

e. Appointed Justices are also insulated from the influence of campaign politics. The Commission would only require impartiality, fairness, and adherence to the rule of law. Again, appointees will be able to assume the bench free from even the appearance of preconception or doctrinal fealty.

f. The nominating commission method allows for studied and deliberate decision-making. The Commission’s interview processes will provide the ability to obtain information and impressions that would never be available from a campaign ad or event.
APPOINTMENT vs ELECTION

While the Task Force on Maintaining a Fair and Impartial Judiciary’s decision to propose a system of judicial appointment was already made when the Drafting Task Force commenced its efforts, it is instructive to set forth the basis for the decision to implement an appointment-based judicial selection process.

a. Anonymously funded, unidentified attack campaign ads were purchased for use in Arkansas’s last three Supreme Court Justice campaigns. Under present Arkansas law, the purchasers of those attack ads do not have to identify the source of their funds.

b. While the Bar and the Task Force on Maintaining a Fair and Impartial Judiciary do not assert any fault or wrong doing on the part of the successful Supreme Court candidates in those three elections, the influence and potential misuse of such unidentified attack ads sounded an alarm. The Task Force on Maintaining a Fair and Impartial Judiciary was created to investigate the use of such ads and to suggest methods for eliminating their influence, while preserving our fair and impartial judiciary.

c. Our current Arkansas Constitutional Judicial article, found in Amendment 80 permits implementation of appointed Supreme Court Justices.

d. At present, 30 states operate an appointment process for selection of some or all of their judiciary. Another 22 states utilize contested elections. In four states the governor appoints justices with legislative or some other form of confirmation. In two states, the legislature chooses the judiciary.¹

e. It is the recommendation of the Task Force on Maintaining a Fair and Impartial Judiciary to implement an appointment-based judicial selection process for Supreme Court Justices to help eliminate the influence of unidentified money that is often contributed from out of state and is almost always spent in support of some special interest.

SINGLE FOURTEEN YEAR TERM

The present term of office for a Supreme Court Justice is eight years. Re-election is only limited by the disincentive of retirement law: Justices who are elected to office after their 70th birthday forfeit their accumulated and future retirement benefits. According to the information produced by the Task Force on Maintaining a Fair and Impartial Judiciary, the average length of service of an Arkansas Supreme Court Justice is fifteen years. When considering length of terms and methods of reappointment, the Drafting Task Force selected the single fourteen-year term as a superior method over retention elections or resubmission to the Judicial Nominating Commission. The following is a summary of the rationale for this decision:

a. Retention elections pose significant problems. In a retention election, a serving Justice seeking to remain on the bench stands before the electorate for a vote of approval or rejection. There is no opponent - only yes or no.

b. Retention elections reintroduce campaign finances and campaign politics into the Justice selection process.

c. While contested elections are susceptible to anonymous attack campaign ads, retention elections have proven to be subject to an even greater concentration of attack ads. Where the electoral process features only a yes or no vote, negative ads have been particularly successful. Ads honing in on single issues are prevalent. Meanwhile the responses of the retention candidate are limited by judicial canons. The disparity between the limitations on the candidate and the wide open airwaves for the attack ads creates an unlevel campaign playing field.

d. Scholarly research shows that votes and opinions of the judiciary may become tailored to satisfy certain interest groups as retention elections grow close. Extending the length of the Justice’s term and thereby eliminating the need for a retention election frees the Justice to vote according to conscience and the rule of law and not according to political necessity.

e. Similarly, returning a sitting Justice to the Judicial Nominating Commission for a renewed nomination and appointment process may create those same vote and opinion tailoring issues.

f. The single fourteen year term was determined by the Drafting Task Force to be the best approach for insulating Justices from actual and perceived improper influences and thus to achieve the desired goal of a continued fair and impartial Court.

g. Given the average length of service as reported by the Judicial Council to the Task Force on Maintaining a Fair and Impartial Judiciary, and given the present length of service necessary to attain a full retirement benefit, the fourteen year term was adopted.
