EASING INTO SUMMER

As I write this, the temperatures remain mild and oh so pleasant. I feel like I am on the coast with the breezes and beautiful skies. However, I am sure this will change soon, and it will feel like the San Joaquin Valley again!

Several of you have asked about the Bakersfield back-up generator. I wish I could say, the project has been completed, but it has not. The project is underway and equipment has been ordered. Harsh weather kept us from moving forward last year, so it was necessary to wait until the weather was mild once again. Then there were complications with the concrete and because the location is remote, and a much larger generator was needed to power both the AC unit and the transmitter, the costs were all much more than initially anticipated. As a result, what we thought would cost in the range of $25-30,000 has now exceeded $50,000 and not all of the invoices are known. Our goal is to provide a more reliable signal to South Valley listeners and we know this back-up generator is the best way to keep the station on the air during the hot temperatures and frequent summer outages. Gifts for this project are welcome! When the project is complete, which I hope is at the time you are reading this, I will send out a celebratory message. In the interim, I thank everyone for your extreme patience and generosity.

Special thanks to the news team, headed up by Joe Moore, Executive Producer, Rebecca Pleavin award winning reporter, Ezra Romero, Producer/Reporter. Ezra is a recent graduate of Fresno State and his efforts here at Public Radio have moved Valley Edition to another milestone. Rebecca’s report on Valley Fever was given national attention, when heard on Morning Edition, a short time ago. Recently, she received recognition from Healthy Communities Access Partners for her reporting at Vida en Valle and at Valley Public Radio. Juanita Stevenson, former host for Valley Edition, has accepted a full-time position with EDC in Fresno as their Locations Coordinator. We wish Juanita the best as she another community interest. Do not be surprised if you hear her reports, as she is determined to stay connected via occasional local reports. I commend Joe Moore, for taking such thoughtful steps as we gradually build a local news presence for the San Joaquin Valley. It takes time and resources and we are extremely grateful to our major partners, the James Irvine Foundation and California Health Care Foundation. Ultimately, our foundation partners want to see the local community support the project, so your membership and partnership matter! Thank you.

I know many of you understand the ending of Talk of the Nation was an NPR decision and not a local station decision. I mention this again, because of the many comments I hear. I invite you to tune in to Here and Now, which has a new format and new hosts. This is a proven format, faster paced, and has appeal to public radio audiences. Give it time and ask yourself, “what do I learn from this program and how does this impact my life?” I will be eager to hear your comments.

One lucky winner, will be awarded a $10,000 gift, from the Valley Public Radio Opportunity Drawing. Stay tuned for more information on second and third prizes, as well as how to enter the drawing. All proceeds from this drawing benefit programs you hear on Valley Public Radio, however please know this is not a tax deductible or membership contribution. We appreciate your participation and look forward to announcing the winners.

Best wishes to Kristen Furtado, our Business Intern, from Fresno State. Kristen’s tenure with the station included three years of helping in the Business Development and most recently, helped orchestrate the silent auction at the Wine Tasting. Her degree in Mass Communications takes her to the Bay Area to work with a technology company involved in online marketing. We wish her the best.

Stay connected and travel with Valley Public Radio. We guarantee you will not only learn about your community, but the world around you.

“Summer Scoop” Examines the Valley’s Ice Cream Culture

SPECIAL SUMMERTIME SERIES FROM VALLEY PUBLIC RADIO

What can ice cream teach us about life in the San Joaquin Valley? That’s the question behind a new series of special reports airing this summer on Valley Public Radio called Summer Scoop. It turns out that ice cream is a lot more than just a sweet summertime treat – it’s a window into the valley’s culture, communities, economy and diversity.
This summer our reporters Rebecca Plevin and Ezra Romero will bring you interesting stories about our ice cream traditions and nostalgia. You can hear the reports on Valley Edition and see photos, video and other interactive elements on KVPR.org.

We’ll travel to the world’s largest ice cream factory, which is located here in the valley, and learn how and why Central California produces a large portion of the nation’s ice cream. We’ll visit storied ice cream parlors like Superior Dairy and Dewar’s and find out what’s made them successful for a combined 188 years.

Our series will look at the valley’s many diverse cultures and their own unique approaches to ice cream. We’ll look at the history of the paleta, a Mexican fruit based ice cream treat which is gaining in popularity. We’ll also explore other local ethnic ice cream treats from the mochi of Kogestu-Do in Fresno’s Chinatown to the rose water-infused ice cream of the local Persian community.

We’ll gain insights into life in small valley towns like Dinuba, where generations of students and parents have gathered for dipped soft serve cones at the same downtown Foster’s Freeze after big events, from football games to graduation.

People also have very powerful memories and stories about ice cream. From going to Thrifty Drug for a cone with grandpa, to parties at Farrell’s, Summer Scoop wants to hear your favorite ice cream memory, for possible inclusion on a future broadcast as we look at ice cream nostalgia. You can email us at talk@kvpr.org or share your comments online using social media sites like Twitter and Instagram by using the hastag #scoop89.

As part of our series, on June 6th, we hosted a “Paleta Party” tweetup at Fresno’s La Reina de Michoacan Paleteria Y Neveria. Over 30 people recorded their own ice cream related stories at the event, shared their experiences with social media and enjoyed flavorful paletas ranging from mango and strawberry to avocado and tamarind.

You can hear our Summer Scoop features on Valley Edition throughout the summer, Tuesday mornings at 9:00 AM and Tuesday nights at 7:00 PM. You can also hear the stories and see photos, videos and more online at http://KVPR.org/programs/summer-scoop/

Beginning on July 1, Valley Public Radio will broadcast Here & Now Monday through Thursday from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. to meet growing audience demand for midday news and analysis. A live production from NPR and WBUR, Boston, in collaboration with public radio stations across the country, Here & Now reflects the fluid world of news as it’s happening, with timely, smart and in-depth news and conversation.

Here & Now has a successful track record: it began at WBUR in 1997 and is carried today by over 180 stations nationwide. Here & Now will expand from one to two hours on July 1 in collaboration with NPR. The expanded program will serve as a bridge in midday, between NPR’s signature news magazines, Morning Edition and All Things Considered. This marks the first time NPR has collaborated with a member station on a daily news program.

Valley Public Radio joins over 100 stations nationwide carrying the expanded Here & Now, presenting listeners the opportunity to hear more NPR news from around the world and across the country every weekday. The program's daily lineup will include interviews with NPR hosts, reporters, editors and bloggers as well as news from stations across the nation. In the midday timeslot, Here & Now will often function as public radio’s first source for breaking news coverage with NPR.

Here & Now has been hosted by Robin Young for more than a decade. A Peabody Award-winning journalist, she has reported for NBC, CBS and ABC television, and was substitute host and correspondent for The Today Show. Starting July 1, Young will be joined by co-host Jeremy Hobson, most recently host of Marketplace Morning Report. Hobson has broad producing, reporting and hosting experience at the station, program and network level. Additionally, Meghna Chakrabarti, co-host of WBUR’s Radio Boston, has been selected as the program’s primary back-up host.

To ensure that Here & Now reflects what’s happening in a diverse geographic range of communities, NPR and WBUR have invited other public radio stations across the nation to contribute to the show. Listeners can expect to hear these segments presented as feature reports, interviews or straightforward collaboration when news is unfolding in a specific part of the country.

Since the NPR collaboration with WBUR was announced, numerous NPR journalists have already been on Here & Now, including Morning Edition Host Steve Inskeep, Senior Washington Editor Ron Elving, International Correspondent Peter Kenyon and White House Correspondent Scott Horsley. Digital-first productions, like NPR Music and Monkey See, NPR’s pop culture blog, are being developed as regular weekly on-air segments for Here & Now.
ROBIN YOUNG

Host

Robin Young is the award-winning host of Here & Now, produced by WBUR in Boston. Under her leadership, Here & Now has established itself as public radio’s indispensable midday news magazine: hard-hitting, up-to-the-moment and always culturally relevant.

A Peabody Award winning documentary filmmaker, Robin has been a correspondent for ABC, NBC, CBS and the Discovery Channel. She is a former guest host of The Today Show on NBC, and one of the first hosts on Boston’s ground-breaking television show, Evening Magazine.

Robin has received five Emmy Awards for her television work, as well as two CableACE Awards, the Religious Public Relations Council’s Wilbur Award, the National Conference of Christians and Jews Gold Award, and numerous regional Edward R. Murrow awards.

A native of Long Island, Robin holds a bachelor’s degree from Ithaca College. She has lived and worked in Manhattan, Washington D.C. and Los Angeles, but considers Boston her hub. Follow Robin on Twitter, @hereandnowrobin

JEREMY HOBSON

Co-Host

Jeremy Hobson joins Robin Young in July 2013 as co-host of Here & Now, public radio’s indispensable midday news magazine, produced by NPR and WBUR.

Jeremy is currently the host of American Public Media’s (APM) Marketplace Morning Report, an eight-minute daily business news program with an audience of more than six million. He started at Marketplace in 2007 as a reporter based in Washington, D.C. and covered Wall Street and its impact on ordinary Americans during the 2008 financial collapse.

Prior to his time at APM, Jeremy worked as a reporter and producer at NPR on shows ranging from All Things Considered, Day to Day and Wait Wait...Don’t Tell Me! He has also worked as a host and reporter for public radio stations including WBUR (Boston), WILL (Urbana), WCAI (Cape Cod) and WRNI (Providence).

Jeremy’s radio career began at age nine when he started contributing to a program called Treehouse Radio. He’s a graduate of Boston University and the University of Illinois Laboratory High School. Follow Jeremy on Twitter, @jeremyhobson and @hereandnow Story on impact of valley fever by FM89’s Rebecca Plevin gets national attention.

For residents of Central California, the airborne fungal disease known as valley fever has been a fact of life for decades. But even as the number of cases of the disease spiked in recent years, attention from policy makers has lagged far behind many other diseases which kill or sicken far fewer people.

But earlier this May, the disease got a major dose of national exposure, thanks in part to a major feature on NPR’s Morning Edition. Hosts David Greene and Steve Inskeep introduced the report from KVPR’s own Rebecca Plevin during the program’s weekly Monday morning “Your Health” segment. Plevin talked with the physicians and researchers who are battling the disease, and profiled two Central California residents who are fighting the fungus, eight year-old Emily Gorospe of Delano and Paso Robles winemaker Todd (Schaefer) Scully.

The piece was produced by Valley Public Radio in association with the USC Annenberg-based Reporting On Health Collaborative. After airing nationally, the piece spawned thousands of online comments on NPR.org and social media. It also inspired a number of other media organizations to do similar stories, including a feature on the CBS Evening News, the Voice of America and the Daily Mail (UK).

“This is a great example of the impact that quality journalism can have,” says Director of Program Content Joe Moore. “This is a story which we first aired on Valley Edition last November, and now it’s gone national, airing on around 700 public radio stations. Rebecca did a great job, both in developing this story and her sources, and in telling this complex story to a national audience.”

This July 4, America’s national Independence Day celebration broadcasts live from the West Lawn of the United States Capitol. Hosted by Emmy Award-winning TV personality Tom Bergeron and NPR’s Korva Coleman, the event features performances from some of America’s best known celebrities and musical artists.

This year’s concert stars music legend Barry Manilow, who is back by popular demand following his powerful debut performance on the show in 2009. It also features performances by Candice Glover, the Season 12 winner of American Idol; country music artist Scotty McCreery; actor and singer Darren Criss; classical crossover star Jackie Evancho; Broadway and TV star Megan Hilty; and five-time Academy Award-winner John Williams conducting music from the Oscar-winning film Lincoln with the National Symphony Orchestra under the direction of top pops conductor Jack Everly.

In celebration of America’s 236th birthday, the show is capped off with a rousing rendition of Tchaikovsky’s “1812 Overture” complete with live cannon fire provided by The United States Army Presidential Salute Battery, an audience favorite and now an A Capitol Fourth tradition. Also participating in the event are The Choral Arts Society of Washington, along with The U.S. Army Herald Trumpets, The U.S. Army Ceremonial Band, the U.S. Air Force Ceremonial Band, members of the Armed Forces carrying the state and territorial flags and the Joint Armed Forces Color Guard provided by the Military District of Washington, D.C.

SPRING CLEANING!

Donate that unwanted vehicle to FM89!

There are many ways to support FM89 - including vehicle donation! You can donate any used car, SUV, motorcycle or even a boat. These donations help us bring you all of the programming you enjoy each and every day.

We all know someone who has that “project” in their garage or driveway. Or that car they’re “saving for when the kids start driving.” If your spring cleaning includes the harsh reality check that your project-on-wheels needs to go, please consider donating it to Valley Public Radio.

In 2012, vehicle donations raised nearly $22,000 for FM89. That number is increasing every year.

Vehicle donors each receive a 1-year membership, free towing from wherever the vehicle is located, and a tax deduction.

To donate your vehicle, go to www.kvpr.org or call John English for more information at (800) 275-0764, ext. 17.

And thanks!
