

WAMC Program Guide

March 2014 - Volume 20 Issue 3

Thanks for your support in the Fund Drive

With Thanks and Admiration

Alan S. Chartock
WAMC President and C.E.O.

Everywhere I go, people are congratulating the radio station for, by far, the fastest million dollar fund drive in history. I always try to make the point that it is not the WAMC staff and board that deserve the kudos but all of you who made it happen. The amount of money that came in before the drive even started was astounding. A few weeks out we had about $300,000 in the magic locked (or lox or lock) box. We announced that number on the air and within days, we had $417,000 in the box. Every penny that came in before the drive that was marked for the box was accounted for and added to the total and used to shorten the drive.

The on-air portion of the drive started early on a Monday and four and a half days later we were finished. Astounding! Even with all the money that was in the locked box, people were incredibly generous. Working together, as WAMC'ers always do, we were averaging over $100,000 a day. On the last day we needed a little less than $150,000 to end the drive and by noon, it was done. Can you imagine? The drive was over in four and a half days!

March Programming Notes

Katie Britton
WAMC Programming and Outreach Director

March may be coming in like a lion, but keep your fingers crossed that the lambs will be arriving shortly and April showers will indeed bring May flowers. Is that enough modismos for you? (Obviously I'm getting a little punchy with all the snow.) This month, I'd like to highlight a few of our regular shows, as well as some specials we'll have on tap.

It's Women's History Month, though I think women should be celebrated all year long. That's why we produce and distribute 51%, The Women's Perspective. Host and Producer Susan Barnett not only has fascinating conversations with women from all walks of life, but she takes it a step further, and looks at how society, cultures, and our lives are affected by landmark decisions, community organizations, and the choices a person makes. It isn't a show by women for women; it's a show for everyone to hear a different or new perspective on the simple and complex things in life, and how we can make a difference. The show airs Thursday nights at 8PM, and repeated the following Wednesday at 3PM.

Remember the excitement of the great space race? We'll be airing the special Rocket Girls and Astroettes. This program is the story of women in the ultimate Man's World – the labs and Shuttle crew cabins of NASA. Told in the first person, these stories explore the experiences of NASA's first woman engineers and scientists and its first astronauts. The special also tells the fascinating story of a group of women pilots who – in the early 1960s – were led to believe that they would be America's first women astronauts and were

A million dollars. Who would have thunk it possible?

It was particularly helpful when a lot of the people who put money into the locked box reached out during the drive and said, "Here's a little bit more for my radio station." This is yet more proof that WAMC is a community and when a community forms and marches ahead, people have a stake in its progress. We can only hope that now that we've had such a great start, we can keep it going.

So why do people put money in the locked box? Of course, there are any number of reasons but the first and most obvious is that people love their regular programming and don't want to lose it to a fund drive. The second is that folks really love the staff at WAMC and recognize that although we love our work, including the fund drives, we work even harder than usual during the fund raising. I can't tell you how many people have come up to me and asked, "How do you do it?" I think it can be explained by adrenalin. We produce enough adrenaline to get us through the marathons and it stays in the body for as long it is necessary. After the adrenaline leaves the body, though, there is an inevitable crash. I was delighted that after this last four and a half day drive there was almost no crash. That's really extraordinary. In the past when drives approached ten or eleven days, the crash was huge. There have been times when the effects of the crash have left me feeling like I could push a marble across the floor with my nose.

People also put money in the locked box because they don't want to forget to contribute once the drive has begun. I can't tell you how many people have told me that they are relieved of potential guilt feelings because they know their money is in the box.

I say to everyone who put money in the locked box or during the on-air portion of the drive, "Thank you!" People tell me all the time that the fund drive is their favorite time on the station. They say that they love the common effort we are all making and they love hearing from their friends and neighbors. I love that part, too. And, of course, I love and thank all of you who understand what this is all about.

- Alan

After strong 2013, what's ahead for investors?

Provided by RBC Wealth Management and Thomas E. Brockley

If you're an investor, you probably had a lot to smile about in 2013. After all, the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose almost 30 percent, the biggest jump since 1997, while the Dow Jones industrial average gained 26.5 percent for the year. But 2013 is now in the books — so, what can you anticipate in 2014?

As baseball Hall of Famer Yogi Berra is quoted as having said: "It's hard to make predictions — especially about the future." And these words are certainly applicable for anyone who would like a precise forecast of the investment climate. Yet, it may be reasonable to say that the outlook for 2014 is pretty good, based on these factors:

- Greater spending by consumers — Consumer spending, essential to economic growth, may be on the rise in 2014. Consumer sentiment is improving and sales reports are looking up in some important areas, such as the auto industry.
- Rise in corporate profitability — Corporate profits are generally the driving force behind the performance of the financial markets. In 2013, corporate profits were generally strong, despite a somewhat sluggish economy marked by relatively weak consumer demand. Corporations were able to maintain profitability, due in part to their aggressive cost-cutting efforts. Assuming consumer spending does increase in 2014, corporate profits could be even stronger than they were in 2013.
- Growth in manufacturing — Toward the end of 2013, industrial production in the U.S. hit an all-time high, and signs point toward continued growth in 2014.
- Increased supplies of energy — Domestic companies have greatly increased their oil and gas production, leaving Americans less dependent on foreign suppliers. In fact, the U.S. will become the world's largest oil producer by the end of 2015, two years ahead of previous estimates, according to the International Energy Agency. As energy prices fall, consumers will have more money to spend in other areas — which should be good news for the financial markets.
- Brighter employment outlook — While unemployment remains high, the picture seems to be improving somewhat. A larger labor force means an increased demand for goods and services — which translates into economic growth and potential expansion of the financial markets.
- Less "drama" in Washington — In December, Congress and the Obama administration reached a two-year budget agreement that may help avoid events, like the partial government shutdown of last October, that can disrupt the economy. This agreement should be favorable for the financial markets, which don't like uncertainty. Still, there's no guarantee of complete "smooth sailing" in Washington, as we could be looking at another debt-ceiling debate early in 2014.
- Low interest rates — When interest rates are low, it's easier for businesses to borrow money to expand their operations; consequently, low rates typically act to stimulate the economy. And as 2014 began, interest rates remained near historic lows. However, with the economy showing signs of strength, the Federal Reserve may allow rates to drift higher, but this increase will probably be a gradual one. Nonetheless, if the Fed ends its bond-buying program, which it began to help keep long-term rates low, you may need to pay close attention to your holdings in bonds, because their value will likely fall as rates rise. (Generally, bond prices move in the opposite direction of interest rates.)
- Low inflation — As an investor, you probably don't want to see high inflation. To illustrate: If your investments earn six percent after taxes, but the inflation rate is four percent, your "real" gain is just two percent. But for the past several years, inflation has almost been a non-factor — so much so that some economists began worrying about deflation, which can actually have a negative effect on the economy and the financial markets. For 2014, the Federal Reserve is estimating that inflation will once again remain low, but not so low as to enter the deflation "warning zone."

As the evidence shows, you may have the wind at your back as an investor in 2014. Still, even the most favorable projections can be off-target, so it's a good idea, as always, to be prepared for anything. Your best move is to maintain a diversified portfolio of quality investments, tailored to your individual risk tolerance and specific goals. Consider hiring a financial professional who can help you meet your financial goals.
