

INTERLOCHEN

Arts Camp

178th Program of the 89th Season
Interlochen, Michigan

*

CHAPEL ORGAN RECITAL

Kola Owolabi, organ

Sunday, July 31, 2016

5:00pm, Dendrinos Chapel/Recital Hall

- Paeon from Six Pieces for Organ (1940) ..... Herbert Howells
(1892-1983)
- Sonata in F Major, Op. 149 ..... Charles Villiers Stanford
Allegro, molto moderato (1852-1924)
Tempo di menuetto (Allegretto)
Allegro maestoso
- Little David, Play on Your Harp ..... Joe Utterback
Balm in Gilead (b. 1944)
- Prelude and Fugue in B Major, Op. 7, No. 1 ..... Marcel Dupré
(1886-1971)

* * *

KOLA OWOLABI is Associate Professor of Organ at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. There he teaches courses in organ, improvisation, and sacred music. From 2006 to 2014, he taught at Syracuse University and served as University Organist. Dr. Owolabi has an active career as a recitalist, giving performances in the United States and abroad, including Saint Thomas Church, Fifth Avenue, New York City; Saint Paul's Anglican Church, Toronto; University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica; and Église du Bouclier, Strasbourg, France. He has also been featured at the American Guild of Organists and Organ Historical Society conventions. Dr. Owolabi has performed numerous concerts as organist and harpsichordist with the Grammy-nominated vocal ensemble Seraphic Fire and Firebird Chamber Orchestra, based in Miami, Florida. He is a published composer, receiving numerous commissions, and has had his pieces selected as competition repertoire. In 2002, Dr. Owolabi was awarded second prize and audience prize at the American Guild of Organists National Young Artists' Competition in Organ Performance. He holds degrees in organ performance and choral conducting from McGill University, Yale University, and the Eastman School of Music. His former teachers have included Bruce Wheatcroft, John Grew, Martin Jean, Thomas Murray, Hans Davidsson, and William Porter.

* * *

Interlochen Arts Camp is part of the nonprofit Interlochen Center for the Arts, a recipient of the National Medal of Arts and the only community in the world that brings together the finest in arts education, performance and public radio.

In consideration of the performing artists and other patrons, the use of flash photography is not permitted. Federal copyright and licensing rules prohibit the use of video cameras and other recording equipment.

In order to provide a safe and healthy school, Interlochen maintains a smoke-free and alcohol-free campus. Michigan law prohibits any weapons, including concealed weapons, on Interlochen property because we are an educational campus. Thank you for your cooperation.

www.interlochen.org

PROGRAM NOTES

By Dr. Kola Owolabi

Herbert Howells (1892-1983) is chiefly known for his organ music, and the large corpus of repertoire he wrote for the Anglican church, which includes 20 settings of canticles (Magnificat & Nunc dimittis) for the service of Evensong. Yet, he was also a prolific composer of chamber music and orchestral music, with some noteworthy pieces such as the Piano Quartet in A minor and the Concerto for Strings. Howells' career was centered at the Royal College of Music in London where he was a professor for 59 years. He also directed the school choir and orchestra at St. Paul's Girls School in London. He travelled across England as an adjudicator for the Associated Board of the Royal School of Music, and in this capacity he even made trips to Canada and South Africa. His musical style draws on English influences, particularly folksong and music from the Tudor and Elizabethan periods (16th century), but also shows strong influence of French impressionistic composers such as Debussy and Ravel. His Six Pieces for Organ were composed between 1939 and 1945. Paeon, the last of the set, is a somewhat surprising work for those who normally associate Howells' music with an introspective and melancholy style. This piece is a stormy toccata with a quiet and lyrical middle section that features lush harmonies.

One of Herbert Howells' most influential mentors was Charles Villiers Stanford (1852-1924), who was Howells' composition teacher at the Royal College of Music and later referred to him as his "son in music." While Howells was still a student at the college, Stanford conducted the premiere performance of Howells' First Piano Concerto at Queen's Hall in London. Like Howells, Stanford's compositional output consists of songs, chamber music, orchestral music and operas, in addition to the Anglican choral repertoire for which he is most known. Before taking the position in London, Stanford had a long association with Cambridge University. As a student there, he served as organist at Trinity College and conductor of the Cambridge University Musical Society. He was responsible for the English premieres of several works by Brahms, including the First Symphony and the Alto Rhapsody. He was appointed Professor of Music at Cambridge at age 35.

Stanford's Organ Sonata No. 1 in F was written in 1917. Although the harmonic language of this piece is anachronistic for its time, the piece shows Stanford's mastery of the late 19th century symphonic style. The first movement consists of a majestic opening theme in F major, an energetic transitional theme which moves through several keys, and a lyrical secondary theme in C major. A very brief development of the themes from the exposition leads directly to the second movement, a charming, elegant minuet. The third movement begins with a return to the opening theme of the first movement, now in F minor. This theme is then recast as a fugue which builds to a triumphant conclusion.

Joe Utterback (b. 1944) has had a distinguished career as a jazz pianist and composer. He has been actively involved in the jazz music scenes in Kansas City, St. Louis and San Francisco and New York City, while performing concert tours across North America and Europe. Utterback's musical formation as a jazz artist stems from sessions with Ruth Searce, a legendary jazz pianist from Wichita, KS, and from gigs with Native-American blues singer Ginny Lou. He also learned the Gospel style through his involvement with Pentecostal churches. He holds degrees in classical piano performance from Wichita State University and the Doctor of Musical Arts degree from the University of Kansas. He has published over 400 works including pieces for piano, organ, voice, choir and instrumental chamber music. Many of his organ compositions are featured on a CD recording, Utterbackanalia, performed by Andrew Shenton on the Mander organ at St. Ignatius Loyola Church in New York City.

Marcel Dupré's (1886-1971) autobiography contains many anecdotes that depict him as a child prodigy comparable to Mozart or Mendelssohn. He would later take Paris by storm in 1920 when he performed the complete organ works of Bach from memory in ten recitals on consecutive Friday afternoons. He made several concert tours of North America, performing 92 recitals in six months during 1922-23 and 110 recitals in six months during 1923-24. In his tenure as organ professor at the Paris Conservatoire from 1926 to 1954, he became arguably the most significant organ pedagogue of the 20th century. Yet his Three Preludes and Fugues, Op. 7, which rank among his finest and most popular organ works, date back to his student days at the Paris Conservatoire. Composed in 1912, these pieces were written in protest against his composition teacher Widor's suggestion that he compete for the Prix de Rome, which focused on the composition of opera. The Prelude in B major, Op. 7, No. 1 requires an exacting technique from the performer, with its brilliant toccata patterns. The fugue is noteworthy for its economy of motivic material: all of the musical ideas in the piece are derived from transformations of the opening subject and countersubject. At the climax of the fugue, the subject is combined with itself in augmentation, and the coda brings back a motive that was heard in the prelude.