Local and National Election Coverage

By Doug Nadvornick, program director

The November general election is an important one, both around the nation and in the Northwest.

At the national level, analysts are prognosticating about whether Republicans will continue their control of both houses of Congress or whether the Democrats will break through and recapture the majority in one or both chambers. NPR and our other media partners will bring us news about important races between now and Election Day.

Around our region, Spokane Public Radio is making arrangements to present many debates and stories about candidates and ballot measures. We're hoping to air one or two debates featuring the candidates in Washington's Fifth Congressional District. We're planning to air two KSPS public television election programs (Spokane County commission candidates/Spokane school and library bond issues) in which I'll be participating. We'll have our own call-in program on October 15, in which we'll discuss Washington (and perhaps Idaho) state initiatives. We'll also re-air several stories featuring Spokane County and legislative candidates that initially aired before the August primary.

Listen to Spokane Public Radio and become informed as you prepare to cast your ballots on or before November 6.

Fall Folk Festival Broadcast Nov. 10

Join Spokane Public Radio for this annual highlight of the fall season. Hosts Verne Windham and Carlos Alden will share the stage at Spokane Community College with some of the region's finest folk musicians at the 2018 Fall Folk Festival, presented by the Spokane Folklore Society.

Performers include Brittany Jean, Kevin Pace & the Early Edition, Heidi Muller & Bob Webb, Wes Weddell, Yang Xu, and Tra le Gael.

The festival runs Saturday-Sunday and is free for all to enjoy. Please join us live at the event on Saturday or tune in to KPBX 91.1 on your radio or streaming online.

Miller Cane: A True & Exact History A Serialized Novel by Samuel Ligon on NW Arts Review

Beginning this fall, Spokane Public Radio, in partnership with the Inlander, will include a special segment on our regional arts program, Northwest Arts Review. Each week we will broadcast a new installment of the novel Miller Cane: A True & Exact History by Spokane author Samuel Ligon.

Miller Cane is the story of a fraudulent historian who makes his living conning the victims of mass shootings. He returns home to save the young daughter of the woman he loves, taking her with him on his roadshow across the worn-out heart of America, staying one step ahead of what's after them. The story is by turns hilarious, unsettling, bizarre, and fearless. Buckle up and come along for the ride!

Installments of the novel will first appear each Thursday in the Inlander, Spokane's free alternative weekly newspaper. Audio segments will be broadcast the following Thursday on Northwest Arts Review.

If you miss an installment you can find the text online at miller Kane.inlander.com and audio at SpokanePublicRadio.org/miller Kane.

A Note from General Manager Cary Boyce

Balance is at the heart of everything we do. This includes bringing you balanced news coverage, balanced perspectives on many issues, a balanced budget, a balance of news and arts coverage, a balance of local and national programming, and so on. Your support makes this possible, every hour of every day.

You may also have noticed that our service is growing. Local and regional news coverage has more than doubled in the last couple years—and we are working to improve on this. We offer more arts and music coverage with more live broadcasts from our studio. New programs on our schedule are garnering excellent reviews. As audiences seek more balance in their lives, SPR listeners have increased by 20% over the last five years.

I believe the balance that public radio offers is crucial to our community and our way of life. With your help, SPR remains a great resource for balanced news coverage, arts and music, critical weather and civil information, and so much more. Whether you make an annual gift at fund drive, an estate gift, or support SPR through business underwriting, it all translates into a great public service for our communities. Thanks for your support.
